

To Nitro's Potential Adoptive Parents,

We fostered Nitro for two weeks and we think he's a cool little dude. After 6mths in an office, he was bored at Cat Depot and wasn't showing his best side. By the first night he was wandering around smelling all the new smells, slept on our bed, loved having a pat, and was enjoying some play time. It was hard to believe it was the same cat. He clearly loves being in a home, and is a really easy-going cat to have. We wanted to let you know a bit about his personality. We love this guy and we know you will too!

Temperament and Personality

- He is a lovely balance between affectionate, playful and independent. He loves to rub against your legs and have a scratch on the head. After a few minutes of that, he will walk away and sit near you. He likes to be near you, even if he is not interacting with you, and if you listen you hear him purr when he sits beside you.
- He loves to play – his favourite toy is the laser pointer. We made a blanket fort for him, and he loved to sit underneath it. He also loved to hide inside, then attack the laser-pointer. He is not graceful when he runs and sounds like a herd of elephants - it is very sweet! He is very playful and loved having toys out (especially the little pillows). He also liked to play with hair-ties and throw them around the room before chasing them.
- He will lay on my belly in the morning for a cuddle, and slept on the end of the bed. By the morning, I often found him asleep in his own cat-bed. When he heard my alarm go off, he would get up onto the bed for a cuddle.
- Sometimes he will burrow under the bedcovers and sleep underneath the blanket.
- He was great with meeting new people – very friendly, outgoing and affectionate.
